

From PWCC President Ed Lee:

Hi all! Here's this week's list of photo-related & other stuff you may find interesting. (All links have been double-checked.)

I received this email from Bow-Tie Cinemas promoting Lionsgate Distributors' streaming via youtube.com free films in April and May. Check out the announcement here: < <https://www.members.bowtiecinemas.com/ov/b3579424-7f34-11ea-9e2d-e6bf09c92be1> >

From www.petapixel.com:

<https://petapixel.com/2017/09/28/194-photo-editing-tools-apps-know/> The author states: "Hello, photographers. Here's a giant list of 194 photo editing tools and apps you can use in your photography. I started this research for my project Photolemur in July 2016. After sharing lists of 104 items and 148 resources, I've gathered even more photo editing tools for a new and updated giant list. I want to say thank you, photographers, both here and on Reddit. At the beginning, there were only 61 photo tools, and I thought that was a huge list! Now we have 194."

Currently making the rounds and approaching a million views, despite "sheltering-in-place," here's a YouTube version of Queen's Bohemian Rhapsody, performed by a trio of singers and musicians located in different locations: <

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Nd9zdbMFSVU> > As the infobox says: Because of Amy's health problems she is of high risk these days regarding the Corona-virus, so we are all separated, in our own homes in self-isolation. Nevertheless, we still found a way to sing together! Hearing the instrumental guide in one earphone and singing into the camera, we created this video, us performing Bohemian Rhapsody (this was a hard one)! If only for one second this lightens your mood or helps you take your mind off of worrying, we did our job right :-)

The 2018 movie Bohemian Rhapsody includes a full scene-by-scene recreation of the original 1985 Live Aid Concert in Wembley Stadium, London. Amazing comparison of each scene, music and musicians in front of an audience of 72,000: <

Be well! See you soon.
